Copyright

The Festival undertakes to use the films submitted exclusively for selection and the materials of the films selected exclusively for screening during the Festival.

The filmmaker, producer or distributor who submits the film declares that they are the copyright owner, and have acquired or make legitimate use of all the contents of the film. The Festival is not responsible for any complaint resulting from a breach of copyright for the public exhibition of films containing protected material.

Selection

The ANIMAC management will make the selection following the criteria it considers appropriate. The organisation will announce the selected films on its website on 30 January 2019. Before this date ANIMAC will contact those selected in writing, as the films selected must be sent in the optimum screening format before 3 February 2019.

Promotion

The images provided can be used to illustrate the different ANIMAC promotional and communication materials (programme, magazine, catalogue, press, website and other media). The organisation undertakes to use the different promotional materials exclusively to promote a film, respecting the conditions provided for on the registration form.

Shipment and return of copies

ANIMAC will assume the costs of shipping and return of the screening copies of the films selected to filmmakers, producers or distributors. Once the Festival is over, the films will be returned. If the copy is to be sent to another festival after ANIMAC, the organisation will not assume the shipping costs. ANIMAC is not responsible for any delay in the return for reasons beyond its control.

The copies sent for registration – both those selected and not selected – will not be returned and will become part of the ANIMAC database and video library and will not be screened in public without the express authorisation of the filmmaker.

Damages

The organisation is not responsible for damages to copies for reasons beyond its control.

Acceptance of conditions

Participating in ANIMAC implies full acceptance of these conditions.
